To whom it may concern,

Your employee has been evaluated under my supervision in the Tecate Cantina Medical Clinic at Chukchansi Park. The patient has undergone an extensive evaluation. Full function testing has led to the diagnosis of Postprandial Taco Somnolence, a condition more commonly known as "Taco Coma".

In response to the arrival of excessive tacos in the patient's stomach and small intestine, the activity of the patient's sympathetic nervous system has decreased. This shift in the balance of autonomic tone towards the parasympathetic system has resulted in a subjective state of low energy and a need to be at rest.

I advise the patient spend a full day (Friday, August 19, 2016) resting and regaining both physical and mental strength. The current abnormalities in this patient's nervous system function should return to normal by Monday, August 22, 2016.

Sincerely,

DR. ALBERT PASTOR MD, PHD
